WORLD-CLASS DOUBTS

As leaders from the world's richest countries gathered on the coast of France to talk policy at the annual G7 summit this weekend, White House officials rushed to clarify comments made by President Trump on Sunday that he's having "second thoughts about everything" related to the escalating trade war with China. 8

Joe Walsh becomes second Republican to challenge Trump in 2020 GOP primary Former Mass. Gov. Bill Weld welcomed him to the race.

Joe Walsh, a conservative former U.S. congressman-turned-talk show host, on Sunday became the second Republican to challenge President Donald Trump for the party's 2020 White House nomination.

Walsh criticized Trump, who has strong support among Republicans, as a bully who is unfit for office as he announced his long-shot bid.

"I'm running because he's unfit," Walsh, 57, told ABC's "This Week" program. "Somebody needs to step up."

"He's a bully and somebody needs to call him out," Walsh said. "The bet ... of my campaign is that there are a lot of Republicans that feel like I do. They're afraid to come forward."

Asked to respond to Walsh's criticism of the president and decision to run, Trump's spokesman replied, "Whatever."

The Republican National Committee, which is responsible for overseeing party processes like primaries, dismissed Walsh's announcement. The party has already combined operations with Trump's reelection campaign, including holding joint events.

Joe Walsh.

"President Trump enjoys unprecedented support among Republicans. He has already delivered a long list of incredible accomplishments for conservatives and the country. Republicans are firmly behind the president and any effort to challenge him in a primary is bound to go absolutely nowhere," Republican Party Chairwoman Ronna McDaniel said in a statement.

Walsh won a House of Representatives seat from Illinois as a candidate of the Republican Party's fiscally conservative Tea Party movement in 2010, but he was defeated by Democrat Tammy Duckworth in his 2012 re-election bid. After leaving Congress, he became a Chicago-area radio talk show host.

Bill Weld, a former Massachusetts governor, had been the only Republican trying to unseat Trump but his candidacy has so far failed to gain traction.

Former U.S. Rep. and South Carolina Gov. Mark Sanford said in July he was considering a primary challenge because of the rising federal debt.

Weld, appearing on NBC's "Meet the Press" on Sunday, said he welcomed Walsh's entry into the race and would welcome Sanford as well.

"It can only contribute to more robust dialogue and that will be good for the country," he said. "We need to assemble rational people."

"I helped create Trump. There's no doubt about that: the personal ugly politics. I regret that and I'm sorry for that. And now we've got a guy in the White House ... that's all he does."

Joe Walsh

Any Republican challenger will face a formidable re-election effort mounted by Trump, who has consolidated his grip on the party's national and state machinery. A Reuters/Ipsos poll conducted Aug. 19-20 showed 87 percent of Republicans approve of his performance in office.

Walsh said he was undeterred. "I think this thing ... will catch on like wildfire," he said.

Walsh sought to address expected criticism about his past affiliation with the Tea Party, a confrontational populist splinter group of the Republican Party.

"There were plenty of times I went beyond the policy and the idea differences, and I got personal and I got hateful," Walsh said. "I said some ugly things about President Obama that I regret. And, and it's difficult, but I think that helped create Trump, and I feel responsible for that."

"The beauty of what President Trump has done ... he's made me reflect on some of the things I said in the past. I had strong policy disagreement with Barack Obama and too often I let those policy disagreements get personal." Walsh said his attitude contrasted with what he said was Trump's refusal to apologize for anything.

"I helped create Trump. There's no doubt about that: the personal ugly politics. I regret that and I'm sorry for that. And now we've got a guy in the White House ... that's all he does." REUTERS

New York's 'red flag' gun-control law goes into effect

2 "Red flag" legislation signed by Gov. Andrew Cuomo in February took effect Saturday, tightening gun-control policy statewide with the courts' ability to confiscate firearms from persons deemed an extreme risk to themselves or the public. New York is the 17th state to have such regulation. Under the new law, police officers, family members, district attorneys and school officials can request confiscation of firearms if they feel a person is a threat to themselves or others. An Extreme Risk Protection Order (ERPO) prohibits high-risk people from owning and purchasing firearms, and compels them to surrender any firearms in their possession. "This is a big step forward for commonsense gun safety, and it is time for the federal government to follow New York's lead," Cuomo said in a statement Saturday.

De Blasio heckled at live CNN town hall over Garner case

3 Mayor Bill de Blasio was interrupted by a police-brutality protester during a live, nationally broadcast CNN town hall Sunday night as he made a last-ditch effort to qualify for the next 2020 Democratic presidential primary debates. After moderator Ana Cabrera asked why it took five years for a consequence to be handed down following the chokehold death of Eric Garner, de Blasio said, "Eric Garner should not have died," before calling for a "federal imperative" that every police force in America have de-escalation and implicit bias training, among other resources. "What about Lieutenant Bannon? What about Officer Ramos? What about other officers?" the audience member called out. De Blasio did not respond to the woman. As of Sunday, de Blasio did not meet requirements for the next Dem. primary debate in September (deadline Wednesday). MATT KINSEY

Australia to block extremist content online during crises

4 Australia will block access to internet domains hosting terrorist material during crisis events and will consider legislation to force digital platforms to improve the safety of their services, officials said on Sunday. Australian Prime Minister Scott Morrison, who is in France to take part in the G7 leaders' forum, said the government intended to prevent extremists from exploiting digital platforms to post extremely violent content. "We are doing everything we can to deny terrorists the opportunity to glorify their crimes," he said in a statement. Australia and New Zealand have increased scrutiny of websites and social media companies in the wake of the Christchurch massacre in March, when 51 worshippers were killed in attacks on two New Zealand mosques. The attack was livestreamed by alleged gunman Brenton Tarrant over Facebook. REUTERS

Serena versus Sharapova to headline Day 1 at US Open

Anticipation high as Williams seeks 24th Grand Slam title.

There will be no shortage of big-name players in action when the U.S. Open begins on Monday but the talk around New York for days has centered around the marquee matchup between Serena Williams and Maria Sharapova.

Williams and Sharapova — for years the two most recognizable names in women's tennis — will open the evening session at Arthur Ashe Stadium with their first-ever New York meeting in a match that may just have the feel of a championship final.

"Of course I'm going to watch it," defending U.S. Open champion Naomi Osaka told reporters. "I know you all are going to watch it. I think everyone in New York is going to watch it.

"At every Grand Slam there is always some sort of drama. You know what I mean? Like a first round. Like, Oh, my God. So this match just happens to be that for this tournament."

Eighth seed Williams, who is seeking a record-tying 24th career Grand Slam title, owns a commanding 19-2 career record against Sharapova, who last beat the American in 2004 and has fallen to 87th in the rankings amid an injury-hit 2019 season.

"Definitely. That's going to be a match to watch," said Canadian teenager Bianca An-dreescu, who is seeded 15th and plays her first match on Tuesday.

Among the other top names in action on Day One of the year's final Grand Slam are defending champion Novak Djokovic, five-times winner Roger Federer, Australian world No. 2 Ash Barty and Venus Williams.

While that talented group will surely draw plenty of attention, the anticipation for their respective matches will pale in comparison to the Williams-Sharapova matchup.

Williams and Sharapova have not played each other since the 2016 Australian Open. They were set to meet last year at the French Open but Williams withdrew injured moments before their fourth-round match.

While five-times Grand Slam champion Sharapova may be far from her top form, she could still present a challenge for Williams, who has not competed since retiring from the Toronto final against Andreescu with back spasms.

And while their clash is highly anticipated, not everyone in the tennis world is planning their day around the match.

"There are a lot of other quality first rounds. It's not the only first round in the draw," said French Open champion Barty, who kicks off the action at Arthur Ashe Stadium against Zarina Diyas of Kazakhstan.

"I think more importantly I'm focused on my first round on Monday, and that's all I'm worried about for the moment." REUTERS

CDC flags 1 death, 200 cases of lung illnesses in US likely related to vaping Illnesses not linked to a specific product.

The U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention said on Friday it had identified 193 potential cases of severe lung illness tied to vaping in 22 states as of Aug. 22, including one adult in Illinois who died after being hospitalized.

The CDC has been investigating a "cluster" of lung illnesses that it believes may be linked to e-cigarette use, although it has not yet been able to establish whether they were in fact caused by vaping.

E-cigarettes are generally thought to be safer than traditional cigarettes, which kill up to half of all lifetime users, according to the World Health Organization. But the long-term health effects of vaping are largely unknown.

In a briefing with the press, representatives from health agencies, including the U.S. Food and Drug Administration, said they have not linked the illnesses to any specific product and that some patients had reporting vaping with cannabis liquids.

Mitch Zeller, director of the FDA's Center for Tobacco Products, said the agency is analyzing product samples from states, to identify any potentially harmful constituents that may be triggering the illnesses.

He said health agencies are trying to learn which specific vaping products were used and whether they were being used as intended or mixed with other substances.

"Those kinds of facts need to be strung together for every single one of these cases, so that we can see if any other kinds of patterns have emerged," Zeller said.

The number of potential cases have more than doubled over the past week. On Aug. 17 the CDC said it was investigating 94 potential lung illnesses in 14 states.

Brian King, deputy director of research translation at the CDC's smoking and health division, said it is possible there may have been earlier cases that health agencies had not identified.

"The bottom line is that there's a variety of things in e-cigarette aerosols that could have implications for lung health," said King, adding that none of those compounds have been directly linked to the recent hospitalizations.

In a statement on Thursday, Gregory Conley, president of the American Vaping Association, said he was "confident" the illnesses were being caused by devices containing cannabis or other synthetic drugs, not nicotine.

"The bottom line is that there's a variety of things in e-cigarette aerosols that could have implications for lung health."

Brian King, deputy director of research translation at the CDC's smoking and health division

Patients have reported difficulty breathing, shortness of breath and sometimes chest pain before being hospitalized. Some have shown symptoms like vomiting, diarrhea and fatigue.

"The severity of illness people are experiencing is alarming and we must get the word out that using e-cigarettes and vaping can be dangerous," Illinois Department of Public Health Director Dr. Ngozi Ezike said in a statement earlier.

Doctors Urge Knee Pain Sufferers

“Don’t Get ANY Surgery Until You See This...”

After Years Of Intense Study, NYC Medical Clinic Finally Reveals It's Best “Treatment Formula” For Helping Knee Arthritis Sufferers... Especially When So Many Other Treatments Have Failed

NEW YORK CITY - If you are even remotely interested in discovering how the latest scientific discoveries can possibly help your knee pain... then this is going to be the most exciting information you ever read.

Here is why: Knee pain can not only be brutal... it's complex. In other words, it's not a simple, easy fix.

But I'm sure you already know that. Or you wouldn't be reading this.

That's the bad news.

Now for some good news...

Over the years, NYC Pain MD has treated countless knee pain sufferers. And in that time have been able to constantly improve.

And we have come up with a treatment formula that we have found works best and helps the most patients.

This formula has reduced or even eliminated the pain in many. Some were scheduled for knee replacement surgery and felt good enough to cancel their surgery.

It's amazing when patients who were once in excruciating pain... start feeling better. And start walking again. And playing golf. Or tennis. And finally getting their lives back.

Especially when they had gone to other doctors and tried so many other things.

So many had given up hope.

Sound familiar? If it does... check this out...

The Treatment Formula

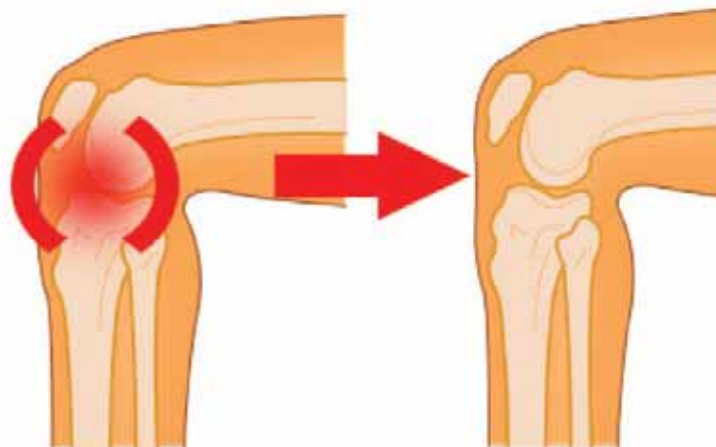

While I can't give you the entire treatment formula here (there is not enough space and WAY too complicated) I can give you the basics. And more important... I can tell you what it might be able to do for YOU.

The first and most important part of the formula is: PATIENT SELECTION.

This means, NYC Pain MD has a detailed screening process to tell who is most likely to be helped by their treatments... and who is not.

If you qualify, you have the opportunity to move forward and experience the worldclass treatments that NYC Pain MD offers.

If you do not, NYC Pain MD will tell you what they think your best options are and help you find the right doctor for you.

NYC Pain MD “Treatment Formula” A protocol of advanced medical treatments that has already helped thousands.

If you qualify, NYC Pain MD offers some of the most advanced medical treatments available today all using the most advanced imaging technology including:

- Viscosupplementation (gel injections)
- Platelet Rich Plasma (PRP)
- Stem Cell Therapy (Lipogems)
- Genicular Knee Block
- And more.

Once again, there is not enough space to go into detail about all these procedures... but here are some things you MUST KNOW...

Viscosupplementation is where a doctor introduces a gel-like medicine directly into the joint space. This helps to lubricate the joints often relieving some, most or even all of your pain. Results can last for 6 months to several years.

Many have had these treatments without good results. However, NYC Pain MD feels this is because doctors often do these “gel injections” without advanced imaging to guide them. Research shows they will often miss the joint. If the joint is missed... it is impossible for the treatment to work.

NYC Pain MD has spared no expense and used advanced imaging to guide the injections assuring the medicine gets into the joint. We frequently get results when this treatment was a failure done elsewhere.

The second thing you must know is... our treatment plans are custom made for every patient. And we have all these treatments offered in the same place. Many times you will get the best results from multiple treatments. At NYC Pain MD your doctors will all be there and will all know each other and you and your case. They work together and give you the best treatments and care without you having to go anywhere else.

The ability to select the right patients and then have the potential to give them any or all of these treatments... with all the necessary medical technology... under one roof... has allowed NYC Pain MD to get better results than they thought possible.

Here's What You Should Do Next

If you suffer with knee pain... and any of this made sense to you... NYC Pain MD would like to offer you a No-cost screening. That screening is the first step in our “Treatment Formula.”

You will get to see a doctor and ask any questions you have. Your doctor will take the first steps to see if you qualify for treatments and give you recommendations.

The best thing is... you will finally get direction. You will know what's going on and what is your best course of action... step-by-step. The treatments will be explained in detail and you will breathe a big sigh of relief finally knowing what's going on and what can or cannot be done.

There is so much we want to say to help you... but I'm out of space. Give us a call at 877-296-6310 and take the first step. That step is free without obligation.

G7: White House steps in to clarify Trump's 'second thoughts' on China tariffs

Mixed messages from president continue at annual summit.

President Donald Trump wishes he had raised tariffs on Chinese goods even higher last week, the White House said on Sunday, even as Trump signaled he did not plan to follow through with a demand that U.S. firms find ways to close operations in China.

Trump raised eyebrows on the sidelines of a G7 summit when he responded in the affirmative to questions from reporters on whether he had any second thoughts about raising tariffs on Chinese goods by 5 percent.

"President Trump responded in the affirmative because he regrets not raising the tariffs higher," White House spokeswoman Stephanie Grisham said in a statement afterward that sought to clarify the president's remarks.

Trump announced the additional duty on some $550 billion in targeted Chinese goods on Friday, hours after China unveiled retaliatory tariffs on $75 billion worth of U.S. goods.

President Donald Trump.

REUTERS

The move was the latest round in a tit-for-tat trade war between the world's two largest economies that has damaged global growth, upset allies and raised market fears that the world economy will tip into a recession.

It came just hours after Trump said he was ordering U.S. companies to find "alternatives" to China, including closing operations there and moving production to the United States.

U.S. Treasury Secretary Steven Mnuchin said Trump could order companies out of China under the International Emergency Economic Powers Act if he declared a national emergency.

Trump indicated on Sunday that he was not planning such a step at this time, however.

"I have no plan right now. Actually, we're getting along very well with China right now. We're talking," Trump said.

Mnuchin said the president did want U.S. businesses to start looking to shift investments away from China, saying they would be better off in the event the U.S.-China trade war lasted for a long time.

"We want them to be in places where they're trading partners that respect us and trade with us fairly," he said on "Fox News Sunday." REUTERS

Iran's Zarif makes 'surprise' G7 appearance amid US tensions

Iran's foreign minister flew into the French resort hosting a G7 summit on Sunday, an unexpected twist to a meeting already troubled by differences between U.S. President Donald Trump and Western allies over a raft of issues, including Iran.

A White House official said France's invitation to Mohammad Javad Zarif for talks on the sidelines of the meeting in the Basque beachside town of Biarritz was "a surprise," and there were no immediate plans for U.S. officials to meet him.

Zarif went straight into talks with his French counterpart to assess what conditions could lead to a de-escalation of tension between Tehran and Washington, a French official said.

European leaders have struggled to calm a deepening confrontation between Iran and the United States since Trump pulled his country out of Iran's internationally brokered 2015 nuclear deal and reimposed sanctions on the Iranian economy.

Earlier on Sunday at the summit, Trump appeared to brush aside French efforts to mediate with Iran, saying that while he was happy for Paris to reach out to Tehran to defuse tensions he would carry on with his own initiatives.

French President Emmanuel Macron, who has taken the lead in trying to defuse tensions, fearing a collapse of the nuclear deal could set the Middle East ablaze, met Zarif on Friday. The aim was to discuss plans to ease the crisis, including reducing some U.S. sanctions or providing Iran with an economic compensation mechanism. REUTERS

Explainer: Why are the Amazon fires sparking a crisis for Brazil — and the world?

Deforestation of the "world's lungs" is up 67 percent year-over.

A record number of fires ravaging the Amazon has drawn international outrage because of the rainforest's importance to the global environment and prompted Brazilian President Jair Bolsonaro to dispatch the military to assist in firefighting.

Here is what you need to know about the disaster.

WHY DOES THE AMAZON MATTER?

The Amazon — 60 percent of which is in Brazil — is the world's largest tropical rainforest. It is considered a biodiversity hot spot, with many unique species of plants and animals.

The dense jungle absorbs a huge amount of the world's carbon dioxide, a greenhouse gas believed to be the biggest factor in climate change, so scientists say that preserving the Amazon is vital to fighting global warming.

HOW BAD ARE THE FIRES?

Forest fires in all of Brazil have hit the highest level since at least 2013 and are up 84 percent this year to Aug. 23, compared to the same period a year ago, according to Brazil space research agency INPE. There have been 78,383 fires so far this year, with roughly half of those in August alone.

Eight out of nine Amazon states have seen an increase, with the largest state of Amazonas seeing a 146 percent rise.

WHAT CAUSED THE FIRES?

Fires in the Amazon are often set on purpose to clear land. After loggers extract wood, speculators burn the remaining vegetation to clear it in hopes of selling the land to ranchers. The Amazon is several months into its dry season during which fires can more easily spread out of control.

Environmentalists say those setting the fires have been emboldened because they hear Bolsonaro calling for more development of the Amazon and think they will not be punished.

Deforestation has risen 67 percent year-on-year in the first seven months of 2019 and more than tripled in July alone. Environmentalists believe those deforesting are the same people starting the fires.

HOW HAS BRAZIL'S GOVERNMENT RE-ACTED?

Bolsonaro initially suggested that the fires were normal, then said that non-government organizations themselves were setting the fires to hurt his government. He did not present any evidence and later backed off from that claim.

Bolsonaro has said that the country does not have the resources to fight the fires in an area as large as the Amazon, while also warning other countries not to interfere, saying that foreign money was aimed at undermining Brazil's sovereignty.

The government has now decided to mobilize the military to fight the fires, and several Amazon states have subsequently requested support.

WHAT DO WORLD LEADERS SAY?

French President Emmanuel Macron has called the fires an international emergency and "ecocide."

Macron's office said in a statement that it would oppose eventual approval of the free trade deal between the European Union and the South American trade bloc Mercosur, because Bolsonaro lied about environmental concerns at June's G20 summit when it was first agreed to.

British Prime Minister Boris Johnson and German Chancellor Angela Merkel have said they are concerned but said that blocking the trade deal was not the right response.

On Sunday, Macron said leaders of the U.S., Japan, Germany, France, Italy, Britain and Canada were finalizing a possible deal at their annual summit on "technical and financial help" for the countries affected by the fires, including Brazil. REUTERS

Demand Soars At NYC Medical Clinic For Promising Back Pain Treatment

Can This Medical Technology Possibly Eliminate Or Greatly Reduce Even The Most Severe Back Pain... Almost Instantly?

The Advanced Medical Treatment Every Back & Neck Pain Sufferer Needs To Know - No Matter How Bad The Pain Is Or How Many Other Treatments Have Failed

NYC Pain MD is a medical clinic with two locations in New York City that has made a name for itself by treating the worst cases of back or neck pain.

Here is what every back and neck pain sufferer who has failed to respond to other treatments and does not want surgery should know about one of the best treatment options available today for severe back and neck pain including when, why and where you should consider this treatment to get maximum results.

If you suffer with back, neck or nerve pain, you have probably already tried many treatments... especially countless pain medications.

Experienced doctors understand that even though pain medications such as anti-inflammatory pain pills are part of the recommended early treatment plan for back pain... they are rarely the answer.

In most cases they have minimal, short term results (if any) and have a laundry list of potential side effects. Some being serious and even life threatening.

Are there any better options?

Thankfully, advancements in science and technology come extremely fast. And now there is very good option to help relieve the pain.

An option that a lot of back and neck pain sufferers may have never heard of before.

Before we get into these treatments, please understand this...

NYC Pain MD is a REAL medical clinic that has treated the worst cases of back pain. Patients travel from all over to be treated at one of their clinics for all sorts of joint and muscle pain because they want the best medical treatments available.

What you are about to discover is a REAL medical treatment. Not some miracle cure you see on infomercials or on the internet.

Know this fact: There is no one treatment that will help every case of back pain.

And we cannot guarantee this treatment will work for you. But this treatment has already helped countless back and neck pain sufferers who had given up hope. I bet many just like you.

What is this treatment? It's called...

Radiofrequency Neurotomy

"Radiofrequency Neurotomy" is often referred to as RF for short.

RF is a procedure that is based on the theory that blocking the nerve supply to the painful area may alleviate pain and restore function.

There are many nerves around your spine and one of their jobs is to sense PAIN.

Radiofrequency waves are delivered to these nerves under advanced imaging to "block" the nerves.

Two procedures are performed. First, a test, diagnostic "Block" procedure is done to determine if the procedure is going to decrease pain and improve function.

If this first "test" procedure is successful, the Radio Frequency Neurotomy is scheduled and performed for longer term relief.

What Results Can You Expect?

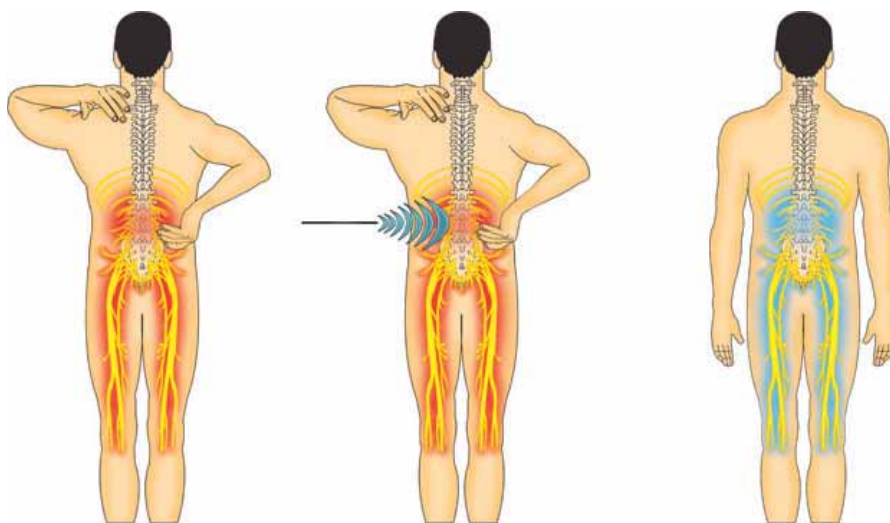

Like all real medical procedures... results vary for individual patients. No good and ethical doctor would guarantee any exact results for any procedure... that's just not how things work and it would be less than honest.

That's being said, it is not uncommon for patients to get complete, if not significant relief of their pain shortly after the treatment.

How Long Do The Results Last?

This procedure "blocks" the nerves pain signals... it does not destroy them. Therefore, the results are safe but not completely permanent. But, many patients get relief for 6 months... 12 months... 18 months for some and some even longer. The great news is - another procedure can be safely performed for more relief if necessary.

Advanced Treatment Uses Radio Frequencies To Relieve Serious Neck & Back Pain

Science rescues back & neck pain sufferers?: Radio Frequency Waves are used to block the nerve supply to the painful area and may alleviate pain and restore function to many.

While we cannot claim this is a complete "permanent cure" but... it can be a god-send for so many who were in constant pain.

Really... what would it be worth it to you could get out of pain for long enough so you could start enjoying your everyday life again?

Would it be worth it to be able to finally get a good nights sleep again?

How about being able to go for a simple walk or just do your basic daily chores without worrying about so much pain?

Is It Safe?

Yes. This procedure has been done countless times and continues to have an excellent safety record. It is minimally invasive and is not surgical.

Who Should Try This Treatment?

RF should be considered after other treatments, such as anti-inflammatory pain medication and physical therapy do not offer good enough results.

RF has also been found effective AFTER back surgery when patient's still feel pain.

The pain after a failed back surgery can be debilitating for some and this procedure may be the only thing that helps give you relief.

What To Do Next If You Are In Pain And The "X" Factor

Here is the "X" factor many do not consider that might be the difference between you getting the best possible treatment or not.

Many experts suggest choosing a medical clinic that offers all these treatments and has the proper, most advanced technology all under one roof without the need for a surgical center or hospital.

Major Savings In Time And Costs Of Care?

NYC Pain MD's method allows you to avoid expensive hospital or out patient surgical center facility fees which often run 3 to 4 times the cost of the procedure itself. And you don't have to go through the huge stress and time consuming process of going all over the city to outside centers. All the NYC Pain MD treatments can be done in out in-office procedure suites saving you stress, time and dollars. NYC Pain MD believes this additional "X" factor is one of the reasons so many back pain sufferers travel from all over to be treated at one of their advanced medical clinics.

Your Invitation

NYC Pain MD offers a limited number of complimentary back pain treatment screenings every month. These screenings are a way for back pain sufferers to get some of their questions answered and see if they are a candidate for one of the cutting-edge treatments offered at NYC Pain MD. If you would like a complimentary screening, just call 877-907-2934 and tell the scheduling expert who answers the phone, "I would like a complimentary back pain screening."

The screenings fill up fast every month. If you do not call in time to get one this month, the expert will schedule you for next month.

This screening is no cost and no obligation.

Many of the treatments offered are covered by many insurance plans and traditional medicare.

Call 877-907-2934 for your free screening and find out if you can get out of pain today.

Rohingya refugees shout slogans as they gather to mark the second anniversary of the exodus at the Kutupalong camp in Cox's Bazar, Bangladesh. REUTERS

On 'Genocide Day,' displaced Rohingya mark two years of exile in Bangladesh

Refugees in world's largest camp fear return to Myanmar.

At least 100,000 Rohingya refugees rallied in camps in Bangladesh on Sunday, marking two years since the start of a brutal military crackdown in Myanmar that forced more than 730,000 to flee across the border.

Massive crowds gathered in the morning on a hillside for memorial prayers for relatives killed in the violence.

Others marched under the sweltering sun chanting "We want justice" and "No more genocide," some wearing white shirts bearing the words "Rohingya Genocide Remembrance."

The commemorations took place amid heightened tensions in parts of the camps after security forces shot dead two Rohingya on Saturday, saying they were involved in the murder of a ruling party official.

More than 1 million people live in the camps in southern Bangladesh in the world's largest refugee settlement, the majority having fled violence in 2017 that the United Nations says was executed with "genocidal intent."

Refugees say Myanmar's security forces and Buddhist civilians carried out mass killings and gang rapes during weeks of "clearance operations." Myanmar denies those accusations and says they were conducting legitimate operations against Rohingya insurgents who attacked police posts.

"We miss our home, our relatives, our beloved ones who were killed in Myanmar," said Chekufa, the leader of the Rohingya Women's Empowerment and Advocacy Network, which organized one of the demonstrations. "We miss them very much today."

Efforts to begin repatriating 3,450 Rohingya cleared by Myanmar failed on Thursday after none agreed to go.

In Myanmar, Rohingya are denigrated as illegal immigrants from Bangladesh, denied citizenship, and subjected to tight restrictions on freedom of movement.

Despite squalid conditions in the Bangladesh camps, refugees are fearful of returning home without assurances of citizenship and security.

"We are very grateful to the Bangladesh government, but we are living here not like humans but like animals, just eating and sleeping," Chekufa said.

TENSIONS

Iqbal Hossain, additional superintendent of police in Cox's Bazar, told Reuters at least 100,000 Rohingya took part in the protests, which were peaceful.

But tensions were high in the southern part of the camp, where security forces have been hunting suspects in the murder of a youth wing official from the ruling Awami League.

Omar Faruk was killed in a settlement near Teknaf on Thursday, police said.

The death sparked riots the following day, with a mob of local people burning tires and destroying shops frequented by refugees.

"A tense situation is prevailing there," Hossain said on Sunday, adding that the two Rohingya shot were killed "in self-defense."

"We are continuing our drive to arrest others in connection with the killing," he said. REUTERS

Why are we fed up with influencers?

At least in the fashion industry, it seems that they are not profitable. But were they ever? Metro investigates.

LUZ LANCHEROS
letters@metro.us

She has more than 2 million followers, but was not even able to sell 36 T-shirts (she clarified that they were actually a lot more... 252). Arii (Arianna Renee), an 18 year old, became famous for showing online how influencers are not that great or unable to boost sales that much: The company she was promoting demanded a minimum of likes that she just could not meet. And her case is not the only one.

In fact, for the first quarter of this year, the proportion between likes and followers of specialized fashion profiles declined by almost two points compared to last year, according to the Influencer Marketing Benchmark Report 2019, from the consultant InfluencerDB. If we talk about interaction and engagement, the like-follower ratio (the interaction of influencers with followers) has dropped from 5.3 to 3.5 percent since last year. Furthermore, another study done by company Cheq and the University of Baltimore revealed that companies lost approximately $1.4 billion when hiring influencers. Ten thousand of them were investigated, 25 percent of their followers were bought or manipulated their engagement even with sponsored posts.

Now, it is known that there are companies that openly buy followers, there was even a scandal for one that bought followers for celebrities (Devumi).

Added to that, in the United States only 36 percent of brands consider that using influencers for their sales is a successful strategy, which speaks of the poor culture and super-saturation that exists with them. Not counting bad practices, both of brands and influencers, that accounts like What the Fake denounce (giveaways, begging for likes, asking for gifts) and scam scandals where influencers are discovered for selling fake promises, classes that are not worth taking or poor quality products, among others.

Millions of followers could not help Arii to sell 252 T-shirts. GETTY

Why do we follow them?

"Everything has a saturation point. Facebook has become just contemplative. People hand out likes, but they comment a thousand times less and only share prefabricated memes. Now, brands have a big problem. They have people in front who have too many commitments and interests with the same influencers. It's a bit like the rope at a club: they just let in the ones they know," says coolhunter Gustavo Prado of Trendo agency. "From Day One it was obvious that influencers had no influence. We can like them, but they don't determine behavior. In the immediate future, the whole marketing issue has to be redefined, because it is based on totally wrong bases. The "customer journey" does not interest consumers. People buy occasional things or always buy the same thing; outside of that, there is no way to change people's behavior. If they sell, it's because their origin is on YouTube. They are the only ones that really pull billions of views."

"What is authentic today, won't be tomorrow. Our mind is designed to ignore what we know and pay more attention to what's new. On the other hand, the world of influencers, like everything that has to do with the digital world, is a world in its early childhood, so brands know that they have to do a lot of trial and error if they want results," explains digital marketing expert Ricardo Orrego to Metro.

Now, it is also true that people today focus more on experiences, and perhaps a person with a prefabricated life (as has been seen in many cases) is not always ideal. And while there are influencers who propose other types of content with consistency and quality and even reach even more massive media such as television and gigantic brands, and there are segments in which they move better (microinfluencers), how much will they impact in the future?

"Will the game for influence marketing end this year? This is due to the lack of transparency, trust and authenticity, which has only worsened due to the poor selection of influencers. As an agency, we want to evolve to overcome these obstacles and focus on the data. We do not believe that the influence marketing bubble will explode and there are many signs that these actors continue to trust the industry," explains Leona McCaul in a FOUND marketing agency presentation. And this is the challenge for influencers, for those who guide their content and for consumers.

Just as Cecil Beaton said in 1954: "There is nothing more original than trying to be authentic."

Kirsten Dunst sticks it to the man in 'On Becoming a God'

We spoke with the actress about her brand-new Showtime series.

PAT KING
patrick.king@metro.us

As the saying goes, we live in the land of hopes and dreams. That slogan practically rolls off the tongue and fits into song lyrics just as easily as clichés about changing seasons. But somewhere along the way, that faith in American mobility seemed to get lost in the shuffle. Nowadays, people have a harder time making ends meet and crossing over into a higher economic status than ever before. To make things worse, predatory multi-layered marketing companies — or should I say, pyramid schemes — have consistently appeared to take advantage of those down on their luck looking to change their lives as quickly as possible. The new Showtime series,

"On Becoming a God in Central Florida," starring Kirsten Dunst, follows a defiant and determined single mother and water park employee named Krystal Stubbs who is looking to get revenge on a pyramid scheme known as Founders American Merchandise that drained her family of their finances and drove her husband (Alexander Skarsgård) to his early demise. I caught up with Dunst to talk about the hilarious new show and getting to play the role of a lifetime as Krystal Stubbs.

It's been a long time since I've started a show and instantly recognized that the main character was going to be instantly someone I was going to root for. I feel like Krystal Stubbs is certainly one of those. What initially drew you to this role and this project?

Well when I read it, after doing " Fargo," I feel like people watch TV so much more now. So, I wasn't sure if I was going to do more TV, but this was the best pilot I read. It was so good. It was just so well written and so unique compared to anything else I'd seen. I always want to do things that are outside the box and different so this was something I knew that I'd want to see a show like this.

Was " Fargo" a big turning point in the kind of characters you look for these days? Does the slow build of television appeal to you more than film lately?

I guess you can just build over a longer period of time, which is a lot more work in the long run, but I think it's more gratifying for audiences these days. I just knew wherever she was going in the story would be interesting to play and a real struggle and something that would be entertaining to watch as well. And funny, too! It had everything I like. I like dark comedies and satire. I just knew it would be a joy for me to do.

The show revolves around a predatory multi-level marketing system (pyramid scheme) known as Founders American Merchandise. Did working on this show make you sympathize more with people who have been tricked into believing they can get rich with these kinds of schemes? I mean it's terrible because it's always lower-income people who can't live off of minimum wage. It just feeds off of people that are in hard situations. It's really depressing. I remember watching the Herbalife documentary [" Betting on Zero"] and it's so hard to watch these poor people or immigrants or people who put all of their money into these things hoping that they can give a better life to their families. We delve into all of that in this series as well.

There is this big turning point where Krystal seems to say, "I'm not going to be a sucker anymore," and she starts working for Founders with hopes to take it down from the inside. Was that righteous revenge story something that excites you about the role?

Totally! Whenever they explained to me what Krystal was going to do, it seemed like a fun journey. It's like taking down the man! Even though she's not in the position to, she's just doing everything she can to manipulate and get herself into that world so that she can get her life back. But also, it's kind of her only option at the time. She just has the water park job. She's a good people person and showman. If we get a second season, I feel like Krystal is going to become a really powerful force on her own and probably become what she hates as well.

Make sure to catch "On Becoming a God in Central Florida" Sundays at 10 p.m. on Showtime.

Although it is something normal for large cities and public facilities to welcome everyone, the market of "No kids allowed" spaces is growing. iStock

'No kids allowed': A new option or discrimination?

Children-free spaces are growing in numbers. But there is a big debate behind the phenomenon.

LUZ LANCHEROS,
MWN
letters@metro.us

While some seem indifferent to tantrums and fits, it could be a version of hell for many. Yes, there are people who no longer see having children as the realization of a dream. In fact, paternity is being postponed to later ages and there are populations whose birth rates are declining, especially in Europe and countries such as Canada and Japan, among others. Why spend on diapers and incredibly high tuition when you can go somewhere without them?

It is an idea that outrages many, since it is considered discriminatory not only for children but for their parents, who also have the right to go to the same spaces that today are growing in numbers, not without controversies.

In fact, the site Adult Only Holidays, who in 2012 had 100 establishments registered, today has more than 400. There are restaurants all over the world that have behavior manuals for parents with children and others that simply do not even admit them there. This has also happened with airlines such as Malaysia Airlines, which does not admit babies since 2011 in first class, and Air Asia X, which has a Quiet Zone that bans children under 12. Same for Scoot, which for a price offers seats where minors are not permitted. This also happens with hotels.

But apart from the right of admission and creating an alternative space, there are other factors, such as security. Or that is what Mexican sound engineer Angel Gonzalez raised two years ago, in a viral thread about why babies should not be taken to the movies: the sound is too loud, it affects and damages their developing eardrums.

Now, the problem is that this has moved to public places like parks and even when house hunting, since in several cities finding a place to rent can be difficult for people with children. And facing that, the law insists that there should be no discrimination. But has it reached the point of hating children, or is it simply a protest against parents who don't know how to control them? And what about these parents?

Lack of empathy?

An episode on a Cancun-Mexico City flight went viral: Lorenza's parents last year handed out earplugs for passengers, explaining that due to her age she would be quite uncomfortable. Something similar was what Amal and George Clooney did with their twins on a flight. And while there are parents who are completely unconcerned about their children (and nobody can say anything to them), it is also hard for them not to go out, or to go out without their children. "It seems to me that they want, especially mothers with children, to go to the private sector, where we won't bother anyone," explains historian and mother Viviana Toro to Metro.

"For me it is understandable that advertising now turns to singles and non-parents, but to what extent is it acceptable? Will certain services be vetoed for us?" she asks. "You have to understand that children from 2 to 6 years old are learning to recognize and manage their emotions. A child with a tantrum will not calm down right away and in any case, what is the kind of correction they expect from one?" She mentions Jet Blue's example, which rewarded passengers who traveled on a flight where several children cried and gave them discounts for it.

"It seems to me that they want, especially mothers with children, to go to the private sector, where we won't bother anyone."

Viviana Toro, historian and mother

And parents are protesting. When restaurant Rome banned children in 2013, blog Scary Mommy titled its article bluntly: "Do you know who hates screaming kids most at restaurants? Their parents."

"Although today not having children is not everyone's project and not liking them is no longer socially sanc-ned, the two positions in a place like the movies are self-centered: Do not bring your children because they bother me or I bring my children. We can watch movies with our children, but if we don't have kids, we can share common scenarios. Now, on airplanes, where we have no options, we cannot establish judgments and criticism with crying children. We have forgotten that although they are someone else's children, as adults we influence them. On the other hand, parents must set limits. Although I declare myself as a person who does not like children, this does not mean that they are not my responsibility. When we understand that parenting is a community job, there will be no such barriers," explains Carine Gomez, dean of the Faculty of Social and Human Sciences and director of Virtual Psychology at the Areandina University Foundation.

Yes, we can hate children, try to stay away from them, pay for it and admit it openly. But in common spaces, is it the child or parents' fault for not doing everything they can? Behind every tantrum is a parent who is probably desperate.

'The Police was never an average rock band' ANDY SUMMERS

Guitarist of the iconic British band reveals the story of Call the Police, a tribute band he formed in 2017 with two Brazilian musicians.

JOSEÉ BARRETO,
MWN
letters@metro.us

How was Call the Police born?

It was born organically. Before we did it, I had been playing in Brazil for several years. I met many people, including Rodrigo Santos (bass guitar and vocals), from the band Barão Vermelho. He is an incredible guy with whom we even play in Brazilian TV shows, in which we mixed his songs with those of The Police. Then João Barone (drums) appeared. We thought it was a good idea to do a tour only with The Police themes. A few shows were enough to realize that people loved this project.

Did you again feel the love for that stage of your career?

I have always been happy to play The Police songs. And it's even cooler because my teammates come from very influential bands. Barone is a drummer for Os Paralamas do Sucesso. I do many solo performances, they have fun, I have fun. I am happy.

Many think The Police songs are very difficult to play.

The Police was never an average rock band. It was the union of three sophisticated musicians who decided to rock, but we were more than that. We started in the London punk scene in 1977, and at that time everyone sounded the same. We did not want to be like someone else. What people hear in The Police is the sound of three musicians reacting to that. We worked like a well-oiled machine. Maybe that's why it's so difficult to sing and play bass like Sting, play drums like Stewart (Copeland) or do my stuff on guitar.

Do you think that purpose of not sounding like someone else is something that has been lost in modern music?

Possibly. First of all, today there is too much music. ... It's amazing. I grew up in a totally different era, there was no one to teach you to play and you had to manage. Now it is an industry. You go to YouTube and everything is there. I am very proud of what I learned at the time I did it. Today I find it very difficult to listen to a lot of pop music. Most of it is very bad. But occasionally something interesting comes out. It is a mass production.

What was the highest point you have reached with The Police?

I think the reunion we had in 2007. We were much bigger than we were in the '80s. We played only at stadiums and that was amazing.

What to expect from your shows with Call the Police?

An exciting night with three very sexy boys in good shape — musical shape [laughs].

Next year, special brain chips could allow people to connect their brains to machines. Metro investigates whether we will live in the “Matrix” in the future.

DMITRY BELYAEV,
MW
letters@metro.us

Technology entrepreneur Elon Musk has recently revealed information about the progress of his secretive start-up, Neuralink, in creating a wireless implantable device that will be capable of connecting our minds to machines. The announcement, accompanied by the fact that the tests showed a monkey was capable of controlling a “computer with its brain” and claiming that human tests will start in 2020, has shocked the world and sparked a debate on whether this tech could save humanity in the future.

“We have no chance without a bio tech, and a brain tech is a part of it,”

Nataliya Kosmyna, Ph.D., researcher at MIT Media Lab, Fluid Interfaces group, explained to Metro. “We should all understand one thing about the current state of the world: The environment around us is changing all the time, but not us. We are extremely limited creatures. Our bodies and, more importantly, our brains are not evolving, especially by themselves. It requires a lot of work.”

She added: “We are also limited by the technology of our time.” But we are really great at learning new things, creating new tech and new intelligence which can ultimately help us as well as the next generations to survive and to thrive. With the era of AI and brain headsets and implants, we now have a great opportunity to test limitless number of outcomes, solutions in all combinations and environments possible, to select the ones that would match each person the best to improve their parameters and abilities on both cognitive and genetic levels.”

Virginia de Sa from the Department of Cognitive Science at the University of California San Diego, on the other hand, believes that such technology is not necessary for “healthy humans”:

“Currently benefits only exist for completely locked-in patients and they provide a way of reading out brain activity — a way of interacting with the world that is not possible through the natural pathways. Again, though, there are other noninvasive options but those methods also currently have drawbacks,” she stated.

But for those who are willing to undergo brain surgery to get such an implant, it could potentially open a countless number of new experiences and opportunities ... although at a cost. Users might gain the ultimate access to control any object around using just thoughts and send commands by thinking about them. They could have a way to restore the movement in limbs after an accident, and have a new way to communicate with loved ones, as well as an opportunity to boost mental or physical performance, or become extremely attentive, focused, and regain a good memory.

“Each of these examples already exists in both forms — factors of the implants but also as noninvasive headsets. It is already a reality,” @nataliyakosmyna commented. “But to date, wires inserted in the brain have not been able to survive longer than just several years. It means that a person who has already undergone a brain surgery will need to get that implant removed and replaced, thus killing a significant amount of brain volume. As specialists point out, there will also be damage to the blood vessels, which would cause mini-strokes as well as damage to the scar tissue. In line with a lot of other researchers, I focus my work on noninvasive solutions that might be less precise currently, but do not provide the same damage as invasive tech.”

So, will we live in a sort of “Matrix” in the future, with superhumans dominating the world? According to experts, our lives are constantly changing thanks to new developments. And AI is the core tech which will turn our lives upside down.

“There will be superhumans and they will dominate the world, but I believe that ultimately it would be each of us, as it is our only way to evolve and reach new heights,” Kosmyna concluded.

SPORTS

The Islanders have a number of options to go with on their third line.

JOE PANTORNO
joseph.pantorno@metro.us

A dormant Islanders off-season received a bit of a spark last week when the team announced that it had signed veteran center Derick Brassard to a one-year contract.

Per multiple reports, the deal is worth $1.2 million.

The 31-year-old is expected to slot in immediately on the Islanders' third line as the replacement for Valteri Filppula, who signed with the Detroit Red Wings earlier this offseason.

It's yet another chance at a fresh start

Brassard adds to Isles' 3rd-line questions

The Islanders picked up Derick Brassard last week. GETTY IMAGES for Brassard as the Islanders will be his fifth team in three years.

After putting up 21 goals and 46 points with the Ottawa Senators and Pittsburgh Penguins two years ago, Brassard had just 14 goals and nine assists in 70 games last year with the Penguins, Florida Panthers and Colorado Avalanche.

It was the lowest point total of his career.

Brassard, however, fits the mold of what Lou Lamoriello has been looking for as the general manager of the Islanders.

The hard-nosed, bottom-six forward will provide guidance and stability to a roster that is poised to put a lot of faith in its youth.

Brassard has been to the postseason seven times in his career, recording 60 points in 99 career games — mostly with the crosstown-rival Rangers, where he spent four years.

He'll be centering a line that is very much up in the air as training camp approaches. The Islanders have a mix of veteran and young wingers like Andrew Ladd, Anthony Beauvillier, Michael Dal Colle, Josh Ho-Sang and Leo Komarov that will be gunning for a third-line winger spot.

The organization also has young forwards such as Kieffer Bellows, Oliver Wahlstrom and Otto Koivu brewing in the minors, as well.

Their ability to co-exist with Brassard will be something to watch as head coach Barry Trotz fills out his roster over the next few months.

Of course, that could all change if Lamoriello has a trick or two up his sleeve.

The Islanders are still in need of a boost to their top two lines. Their offense was one of the worst in the Eastern Conference last season, and Lamoriello has been unable to acquire any legitimate upgrades to the unit.

With Daniel Jones waiting in the wings, Eli Manning's time with the Giants is running out. GETTY IMAGES

Could Luck retirement open an Eli move to Indy?

The young Colts star quarterback announced his retirement over the weekend.

JOE PANTORNO
joseph.pantorno@metro.us

If New York Giants head coach Pat Shurmur and general manager Dave Gettleman remain so high on Daniel Jones, why not start him right away?

This weekend's shocking news that Indianapolis Colts quarterback Andrew Luck is retiring offers a golden opportunity for them to do so.

The 29-year-old announced on Saturday that he's calling it quits after a steady onslaught of injuries derailed a once-promising career.

"I've been stuck in this process," Luck said, per ESPN. "I haven't been able to live the life I want to live. It's taken the joy out of this game. ... The only way forward for me is to remove myself from football."

With just two weeks until the start of the regular season, Indianapolis is now left with Jacoby Brissett — who once again is being thrown into the fire as the team's starter.

The 26-year-old has appeared in 20 games over the past two seasons with the Colts, starting 15 of them.

He's 4-11 as a starter while completing 58.8 percent of his passes for 3,100 yards, 13 touchdowns, and seven interceptions during his Colts career.

Those aren't terrible numbers but this is a Colts team that is on the cusp of competing for an AFC South title. They can't afford to have quarterbacking issues.

There has been no inclination that the Colts are looking for an upgrade under center, but the Giants could dangle veteran passer Eli Manning just to test the waters.

At 38 years old, Manning is on his last legs in the NFL, but the numbers on paper suggest that he still could flourish on a good team and under the right system.

Despite going 5-11 last season, Manning completed a career-high 66 percent of his passes for 4,299 yards, 21 touchdowns and 11 interceptions.

Manning would just have to be a game manager in Indianapolis — a city where his older brother became one of the greatest quarterbacks in NFL history.

His departure would allow the Giants to accrue draft capital in the form of picks while clearing a path for the next-perceived franchise quarterback in Jones.

The No. 6 pick of the 2019 draft has been red-hot during the preseason, which raises questions after each passing week on whether he should get the start come Week 1.

In three games, Jones has completed 25-of-30 passes for 369 yards and two touchdowns, allowing Shurmur to start an "I told you so" shtick.

"I think it's time to start asking the people that didn't like him what they think, quite frankly," Shurmur said, per the New York Post. "That's what we thought he was when we drafted him."

"It's fun, about every six or seven days I've been able to tell you, 'That's what we saw when we drafted him.' He just has a feel for playing the position. He's steadily getting better every time he takes the field."

If Gettleman can ship Manning out of town, albeit rather unceremoniously, then Giants management can further double down on the impending Jones era at MetLife Stadium.

Callaway continues to sabotage Mets

The Mets manager's decision-making has become a major problem.

JOE PANTORNO
joseph.pantorno@metro.us

Mickey Callaway has admitted in the past that he prefers to forego common sense, which only confirms that he isn't fit to be the manager of the New York Mets.

Earlier this month, the second-year boss admitted that "85 percent of our decisions go against the analytics" — a fancy word for stats and trends that help predict the outcome of games and key events.

In an era of Major League Baseball which hinges on numbers and stats, it was a statement that made little sense. It also provided plenty of concern amongst a Mets fan base that suddenly found itself in the thick of a playoff hunt.

The Mets' red-hot streak in the second half has seemingly been in spite of the manager, who has continuously made puzzling decisions that sabotage the team's chances of winning.

It just so happens

Mickey Callaway has fallen under fire during the Mets' hot second half. GETTY IMAGES that his worst decisions are being highlighted in must-win divisional games against the NL East-leading Atlanta Braves.

Less than two weeks ago, Callaway pulled Steven Matz after just 79 pitches despite the southpaw retiring 14 straight Braves while holding a slim 2-1 lead.

The Mets blew the lead and lost the game.

On Friday night, Calloway chose to lift reliever Justin Wilson after a 10-pitch 13th inning of a 1-1 game to bring on the unstable Jeurys Familia for a third-straight day of work.

Familia gave up a run and the quiet Mets bats came up empty to lose in the 14th.

The very next night, in a 5-5 game, Callaway basically took the bat out of Amed Rosario's hands following Jeff Mc-Neil's lead-off double in the bottom of the seventh.

The young Mets shortstop had two hits on the night and was batting .351 over his last 41 games. Yet, Callaway ordered him to bunt, which went wrong.

Rosario was unable to get a bunt down, shortening his at-bat and causing him to ground to a fielder's choice as McNeil was thrown out trying to advance to third.

It snuffed out the inning and opened an opportunity for the Braves as they scored a combined four runs off Brad Brach and Edwin Diaz in the eighth and ninth innings.

Just as the Mets get close to that last Wild Card spot in the National League, Callaway steps in and makes things that much more difficult.

Entering Sunday, they were tied with the Milwaukee Brewers while looking up at the Philadelphia Phillies and Chicago Cubs.

With Callaway at the helm, it's reasonable to think that the Mets might not be able to get over the hump and into the Wild Card.

And not because of their play on the field.
